

University Awards

EBED is offering up to £1,000 in funding for individuals or groups of university students who start or restart a bridge club at their university. The names of the recipients of the awards will be recognised by being published on the websites of EBED and the EBU.

In the first year, £300 may be awarded for establishing a bridge club with two or three tables, entering the Portland Bowl or other local tournaments, and engaging with local clubs or counties.

An additional £300 may be given in the second year for the continued development of the club.

A final payment of £400 may be awarded if the club is active and fully established in its third year.

At the end of each academic year, a brief report or a phone call to the CEO of EBED will be required (contact details are to be found on EBED's website).

In addition to these payments, EBED is open to supporting university clubs in need of equipment such as boards or bidding boxes. However, it is possible that local clubs or counties may be another source.

EBED will provide free access to teaching materials and tournament directors courses.
